According to information seen on the game's director's website, [11] "I think an action RPG that has a story like this in Japan would appeal more to 'fans' with stronger skills than to those who only have a slight interest in RPGs." A month passed since its initial reveal and when the game was updated with the story trailer, we finally have a look at its story. • An Endless Story that Can Be Played With Immediacy - PLAY. From the start, the story is told through letters from the character, the main character Tarnished. The player uses Tarnished as a narrator to hear the stories about the Lands Between. The character's narration is filled with themes that help immerse the player in the story, such as "The power of the Elden Ring." There are both new scenes and original scenes that are difficult to find in other RPGs and novels. - BEGIN. -Through these letters, the player as Tarnished learns that the Lands Between is inhabited by the player character and other characters. At that point, we are introduced to the main characters: the player, Navis, Pieria, and Katerina. -The story unfolds as Navis, Pieria, and Katerina fight the monsters in the various places of the Lands Between and reach the Elden Castle. -From time to time, the player as Tarnished, who is the player character of the main story, is immersed into the story about the Lands Between, reading about what the main characters do. For example, when Pieria confesses to the player as Tarnished about her feelings, we are shown her tears on the screen. Story ■ Tarnished: [Yorkshire accent] "Hey, everyone! I'm back." ■ A Different Approach to the Character Progression - This time, it will be possible to change the class of the main character before his/her battle. Class changeable characters will be able to progress. In a sense, the character customization system functions as "permutations of classes." - The classes, with their immense power and high strength, will be represented with swords in the form of weapons. However, the player can also use these sword classes as a "weapon class" for themselves. The character bff6bb2d33
